First concocted in 1732 at Philadelphia's fishing club (known as the "Fish House"). George Washington was known to be fond of a drink or two, and sometimes more. He indulged in thirteen toasts — one for each state — during a victory celebration at New York's Fraunces Tavern, and it's said that after he partook of Fish House punch he couldn't bring himself to make an entry in his diary for the following three days.
